What's Next for Southern Food?

By Jed Portman

March 4, 2016

With the annual Charleston Wine + Food Festival upon us, chefs, writers, and other food figures from all over the country have swarmed our sunny hometown with flasks and notebooks in hand. Southern food is still a powerful draw. But where is it going next?

We asked fifteen attending culinarians for their visions of the future.

Stirring the melting pot

"We're bringing our diversity to the forefront, and it's been an eye-opening experience for the rest of the country. I don't think the way we're eating now will always feel so... fusion-y. It'll be like New Orleans, where influences from all over the world came together to make a cuisine."—Duane Nutter, One Flew South, Atlanta
